SUMMARY

The Danish Association of Surveyors is a trade union and professional interest organization for the Danish surveyors.

Since 1875, the Danish Association of Surveyors has taken care of the interests of the association's members.

The association's purpose is to be a professional network, influence the development of the profession, promote the land surveyor science education and research as well as ensure opportunities for further education and professional development of the association's members.

The association is contingent financed and organizes about 95 percent of all educated surveyors in Denmark.

The association's operations and activities are carried out by a professional secretariat, an elected board, appointed committees and working groups.

This presentation outlines what tasks the association handles, how the work is organized and what tools the association uses.
